SPEAKER RYAN
DISTANCES HIMSELF
FROM DONALD TRUMP

Donald Trump suffered another political setback when House of Representatives Speaker Paul Ryan distanced himself from the Republican presidential candidate's troubled campaign. Ryan, according to someone familiar with a conference call held by the speaker and House Republican lawmakers, will not campaign with Trump in the run-up to the Nov. 8 elections and will not defend the Republican Party nominee. The source did not say whether Ryan intended to withdraw his support for Trump. But a spokeswoman added that the Wisconsin congressman will focus on maintaining a Republican majority in the House. REUTERS

DUBAI SAYS STARTS BUILDING WORLD'S TALLEST TOWER

Dubai said it had started building what would be the world's tallest tower, another record for the city that is already home to the highest skyscraper — the Burj Khalifa. The Tower at Dubai Creek Harbour — a joint venture between Emaar Properties and Dubai Holding, the investment vehicle of the emirate's ruler, Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid al-Maktoum — will be completed in 2020, Dubai's government said. Its statement did not say how high the tower would be nor how much it might cost. Guinness World Records defines a tower as a structure in which less than 50 percent of the total height is useable floor space. The world's tallest tower is the Tokyo Sky Tree, a 2,080-foot-high broadcasting, restaurant and observation tower. REUTERS

US TOP COURT TO HEAR
APPLE-SAMSUNG FEUD
OVER IPHONE DESIGNS

After five years of litigation, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear arguments on Tuesday in the bitter patent dispute between the world's two top smartphone manufacturers over the amount Samsung should pay Apple for copying the iPhone's distinctive look. The justices' ruling, due by the end of June, could have a long-term impact for designers and product manufacturers going forward because the Supreme Court, if it agrees with Samsung, could limit the penalties for swiping a patented design. Samsung Electronics Co Ltd paid Apple Inc $548.2 million last December, fulfilling part of its liability stemming from a 2012 verdict for infringing Apple's iPhone patents and copying its look. But Samsung will argue before the Supreme Court that it should not have had to make as much as $399 million of that payout for infringement of three patented designs on the iPhone's rounded-corner front face, its bezel and the colorful grid of icons that represent programs and applications. REUTERS

GoFundMe campaign raising $5M to surface footage of Trump allegedly using the N-word

"The Apprentice" insiders claim there are instances of Donald Trump using racist language but which are heavily guarded with contracts and fines.

AMANDA MIKELBERG
@MetroNewYork
amanda.mikelberg@metro.us

A Massachusetts activist has started a GoFundMe campaign in the hope of raising millions of dollars to secure video proof that Republican presidential candidate Donald Trump has used racist language — evidence that could shatter his POTUS dream.

Aaron Holman, of Somerville, and a few good friends, opened up the "Trump Sunlight Campaign" on Sunday to raise more than $5 million to acquire the video, which could be buried under contractual fees and NBC network licenses.

Following the explosive leak of "Access Hollywood" footage of Trump's predatory, genital-grabbing storytelling, rumors swirled that somewhere out there are even more damaging outtakes from "The Apprentice" that allegedly contain Trump using the N-word.

"We are so confident that there is something more than nothing out there, and we want to make sure that if there is a person out there worried about legal or financial penalties that we have their back," Holman told Metro.

Production insiders from the reality show claim Trump has said "much worse" in footage that is contract-protected and have a "leak fee" of $5 million.

"I don't have the tapes. I've signed a Burnett contract & know leak fee is 5 mill. Hearing from producers/crew N word is the "much worse," tweeted Chris Nee.

Holman set his GoFundMe campaign goal at $5.1 million to cover the potential legal fees and fines a whistleblower might face for releasing protected footage. As of 5 p.m. Monday, the campaign had drawn in about $14,000.

Given the pace of the fund's growth so far, Holman believes they will raise the $5 million by Election Day, and noted that a few high-profile donors have given sizeable sums.

"I think that a lot of people suspect something very large is happening and they want to help find out what that is."

Even if someone does not come forward with a tape, the money raised will be used for uncovering the truth, as he pledged to donate unused funds to the Center for Investigative Reporting.

"The next best thing is to continue to support people who are doing good reporting," Holman said.

The initial rumor of alleged footage started on Sunday on Twitter.

"As a producer on seasons 1 & 2 of #theapprentice I assure you: when it comes to the #trumptapes there are far worse. #justthebeginning," tweeted Bill Pruitt.

"We don't have the legal right to give out the footage from that show," the NBC spokeswoman confirmed.

Aside from typical network protections, the show's creator Mark Burnett happens to be a Trump supporter and friend — a friend who may be keen to shelter a bombshell that might turn attention to perceived racist undertones of Trump's campaign.

Readers crown Trump as debate winner in Metro poll

As they did a two weeks ago, readers declared Donald Trump victorious in Sunday's debate by a wide margin, according to Metro's unscientific online poll.

Nearly 71 percent of the poll participants felt the Republican candidate won the second presidential debate, which some new media have described as the nastiest faceoff in modern history.

Only 27 percent of the readers deemed Hillary Clinton the debate winner.

Twelve percent called it a tie. Readers selected

Trump as the winner of the first presidential debate by a margin of 62 percent to 27 percent in the unscientific poll of Metro readers.

Although Metro readers apparently think very highly of Trump, a CNN poll taken Sunday night indicated that Clinton decisively triumphed in the debate. Of those polled, 57 percent said Clinton won.

Trump's poll numbers were sliding even before the debate.

showed Clinton leading Trump by 13 percentage points in a head-to-head matchup. The GOP candidate's slip in the poll was attributed to the release of the 2005 videotape of Trump making vulgar, sexually aggressive comments about women.

The videotape proved to be the flashpoint topic of Sunday's debate. Trump continued to dismiss his taped remarks as "locker room talk" and moderator Anderson Cooper pressed him on the issue.

"This was locker room talk," Trump said. "I'm not proud of it. I apologized to my family. I apologized to the American people. Certainly, I'm not proud of it, but this is locker room talk." GARY KANE

Five Vermont teenagers killed in wrong-way crash

After the first deadly collision, the driver struck seven more cars, police said.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
letters@metro.us

A driver going the wrong way on I-89 in Vermont crashed into a car, killing five high schoolers before stealing a police cruiser and ramming into several more vehicles, authorities said.

The victims, all from Vermont, have been identified as Mary Harris, 16, of Moretown; Cyrus Zschau, 16, of Moretown; Liam Hale, 16, of Fayston; Janie Cozzi, 15, of Fayston; and Eli Brookens, 16, of Waterbury.

The Williston Police Department was the first to respond just before midnight on Saturday after multiple 911 calls reported a driver, later identified as Steven D. Bourgoin, 36, traveling northbound in the southbound lane on I-89 in a Toyota Tacoma. The crash occurred around the Williston exit.

Police arrived at the scene to find a Volkswagen Jetta on fire. As the officers pulled a woman from the car, Bourgoin jumped into a police cruiser and sped off, authorities said.

A Richmond police officer stationed further along I-89 responded to the report of a stolen police cruiser. When Bourgoin saw the officer, he turned around on the interstate and headed back toward the original crash scene, officials said. Bourgoin then struck seven other vehicles, police said.

Bourgoin and several victims from the second crash were taken to the University of Vermont Medical Center to be treated for injuries.

Police said that Bourgoin was taken into custody, but was still hospitalized as of Sunday.

Officials said the extent of his injuries was not yet known, but that they were not considered life-threatening.

Four of the five teenagers killed — Harris, Zschau, Hale and Brookens — were students at Harwood Union High School. Cozzi was a student at Kimball Union Academy.

Vermont Gov. Peter Shumlin ordered the Vermont flag lowered to half-staff on Monday to honor the five teenagers.

State and local police continue to investigate the crashes. Anyone with information is asked to call the state police barracks in Williston at 802-878-7111.

Harvard and MIT professors awarded Nobel Economics Prize
British-born Oliver Hart and Finland's Bengt Holmstrom won the Nobel Economics Prize on Monday for work that addresses a host of questions from how best to reward executives to whether schools and prisons should be privately owned.

Their findings on contract theory have implications in such areas as corporate governance, bankruptcy law and political constitutions, said the Royal Swedish Academy of Sciences, which announced the 8 million Swedish crown ($928,000) prize.

"This theory has really been incredibly important, not just for economics, but also for other social sciences," said Per Stromberg, a member of the prize committee and professor at the Stockholm School of Economics.

Contract theory considers, for example, whether managers should get paid bonuses or stock options, or whether teachers or healthcare workers should be paid fixed rates or by performance-based criteria.

Holmstrom, a 67-year-old professor of economics and management at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Holmstrom has studied the setting of contracts for workers from teachers to corporate bosses.

He concluded that in high-risk industries, pay should lean toward a fixed salary, while in more stable sectors pay should be more biased toward performance rewards.

Hart, an economics professor at Harvard University, has focused on understanding which companies should merge and with what mix of financing, and when institutions such as schools, prisons and hospitals should be privately or publicly owned.

At Harvard since 1993, Hart has argued that the incentives for cost reductions in privatized services, such as private prisons in the United States, are typically too strong.

Hart was quoted as saying on the official Twitter account of the Nobel Prize. "My first action was to hug my wife, wake up my younger son." REUTERS

Drug Companies Fear Release Of New $2 Sex Pill For Older Men

Big Pharma Worried: Older men are having better sex after taking new JackedUp pill. Clinical trials show active ingredient triggers surge in desire, strength of erections, and sexual activity in older men.

worked. Within a few weeks of taking JackedUp, everything has been functioning beautifully and we've been riding high ever since!"

— Kent S., 78 years old, Phoenix, AZ

Doctors Speak Out

Drug companies are also concerned that doctors are now recommending JackedUp. The active ingredient has strong clinical results and lacks the side effects seen in current drugs on the market. This makes it an easy option for doctors to suggest.

Dr. Laguna-Bedia, a specialist in internal medicine says, "A lot of men think their lack of interest and inability to perform are simply parts of aging. This is just not true. JackedUp can help these men regain a healthy appetite for sex and the physical ability to perform."

"JackedUp works by boosting key male hormones without side effects. The benefits of these hormones to sexual health are well known, but they actually do more than that. Men also report more energy, less body fat and higher motivation," said Dr. G. Pereira, a renowned surgeon in Florida.

Dr. Jacob Moss notes, "I recommend JackedUp if you're struggling with getting and keeping erections or low libido. It's also a great option for men who want to last longer and have more control over when they orgasm."

Special Opportunity for Our Readers

Drug companies are fighting hard to get rid of this product. This is making inventory disappear fast. Thankfully, a special discounted supply has been reserved for Metro Boston readers. But only for those who call within the next 48 hours.

This is the best opportunity to try JackedUp risk-free with their 100% results guarantee.

A Regional Order Hotline has been set up for local readers to call. This gives all men an equal chance to try JackedUp.

Starting at 6:00 am today the order hotline will be open for the next 48 hours. All you have to do is call TOLL FREE 1-800-815-1056 and the company will do the rest.

Due to the possibility of JackedUp being pulled from the shelf, phone lines are often busy. If you call and do not immediately get through, please be patient and call back. Current supplies of JackedUp are limited, and callers that don't get through to the order hotline within the next 48 hours will be forced to wait for more inventory to be produced. This can take as long as 6 weeks.

Health News Syndicate

HNS - It's hard to believe that in America today a pill that could improve the sex lives of millions of men is in danger of being yanked from the shelves. And it's just because big drug companies fear for their profits.

The pharmaceutical industry is desperately trying to stop shipments of the remarkable new "JackedUp" pill. Big Pharma is worried because men are reporting increased sex drive, stronger erections and more stamina - all without the side-effects seen in drugs designed to do the same thing. Clinical results show men feel these benefits within just a few weeks of taking JackedUp's active ingredient.

The pill, made for men over 50, was released early last month. Despite Big Pharma's efforts, sales have already exceeded expectations.

"If you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. Drug companies do NOT want men to know about this affordable new pill..."

Exciting Benefits

There are very good reasons why sales are booming and drug companies want it gone. Clinical results confirm JackedUp's active ingredient is very impressive. It can greatly boost a man's ability to get and keep erections. Stamina during sex also improves.

It also has a unique ability to help men feel more passion, desire, and sex drive. These impressive benefits come from boosting testosterone levels by up to a whopping 193%. Doctors are astounded by its effects.

Why do drug companies want this pill stopped? Since the "JackedUp" pill is natural, drug companies can't patent it (like they did with Viagra) and make big profits. Plus, if you're over 50 and suffering from low sex drive, decreased stamina and inability to perform, low testosterone is the biggest factor. If you can safely boost your testosterone, you won't need their expensive pills. That's the very reason big business is trying to have it pulled from the shelves.

Strong Clinical Results Worry Big Pharma

Recent clinical trials on JackedUp's active ingredient have made the drug companies more desperate. The trial results were published in major medical journals, and doctors are now recommending JackedUp to patients.

The testing was done on men 40 - 65 years old, and the results were remarkable. The men who took the active ingredient in JackedUp reported major improvements in their sex lives. Their ability to get and keep erections went up by over 200%. Libido and sex drive surged. Even staying power and stamina during sex more than doubled!

Head of product development, Dave McNeill, said the big drug companies weren't worried at first. "They didn't care because the active ingredient can take a few weeks before many men really feel the benefits. But these awesome clinical trials really got their attention. They're learning A LOT of men will wait a few weeks if it means avoiding negative side effects and saving money."

How It Works

The active ingredient in JackedUp works by helping older men produce more testosterone. It doesn't force dangerous fake testosterone into your body like injections do. Instead, it works with your body to produce testosterone naturally. And the results have been extraordinary. It's like your body reboots itself to feel like it did in the prime of your life.

Initial Users Are Thrilled ...And Worried

"JackedUp has been awesome for my sex drive and performance! I'm worried it may not be available in the future. The idea that it may be taken away just to secure some big drug company's profits is very frustrating."

— Rob H., 49 years old, Colorado Springs, CO

"My wife and I were both sexually vibrant until I had prostate cancer. After my surgery we tried everything my doctor recommended but nothing

US: Navy ship targeted in failed missile attack from Yemen

The attempted strike on the USS Mason came just a week after a United Arab Emirates vessel came under attack from Houthis and suggests growing risks to the U.S. military from Yemen's conflict.

A U.S. Navy guided missile destroyer was targeted on Sunday in a failed missile attack from territory in Yemen controlled by Iran-aligned Houthi rebels, a U.S. military spokesman told Reuters, saying neither of the two missiles hit the ship.

The attempted strike on the USS Mason, which was first reported by Reuters, came just a week after a United Arab Emirates vessel came under attack from Houthis and suggests growing risks to the U.S. military from Yemen's conflict.

The U.S. government, which has become increasingly vocal about civilian casualties in the war, this weekend announced a review of its support to a Saudi Arabia-led coalition battling the Houthis after a strike on mourners in the capital Sanaa that killed up to 140 people.

The failed missile attack on the USS Mason began around 7 p.m. local time, when the ship detected two inbound missiles over a 60-minute period in the Red Sea off Yemen's coast, the U.S. military said.

"Both missiles impacted the water before reaching the ship," Pentagon spokesman Captain Jeff Davis said. "There were no injuries to our sailors and no damage to the

Saudi Arabia and the United States blame Shi'ite Iran for supplying weapons to the Houthis. Tehran views the Houthis, who are from a Shi'ite sect, as the legitimate authority in Yemen but denies it supplies them with weapons.

A U.S. defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the first missile triggered countermeasures from the USS Mason. It was not immediately clear whether those defenses may have helped prevent a direct hit on the ship.

The USS Mason did not return fire, the official said, adding that the incident took place just north of the Bab al-Mandab strait off Yemen's southern coast.

Last week's attack on the UAE vessel also took place around the Bab al-Mandab strait, in what the UAE branded an "act of terrorism."

In 2013, more than 3.4 million barrels of oil passed through the 12 mile-wide Bab al-Mandab each day, the U.S. Energy Information Administration says.

It was unclear what actions the U.S. military might take, but Davis stressed a commitment to defend freedom of navigation and protect U.S. forces.

"We will continue to take all necessary steps to ensure the safety of our ships and our service members," he said.

The attack also came the same day that Yemen's powerful former president, Ali Abdullah Saleh, a key Houthi ally, called for an escalation of attacks against Saudi Arabia, demanding "battle readiness at the fronts on the [Saudi] border." REUTERS

BRIEF

Obama declares major disaster in North Carolina from Hurricane Matthew President Barack Obama declared a state of emergency in North Carolina on Monday after Hurricane Matthew roared through the state over the weekend.

The action makes federal funding available to affected individuals in 10 counties hit by the storm, the White House said in a statement.

Hundreds of people were rescued by boat and helicopter as floodwaters inundated North Carolina towns on Monday in the wake of Hurricane Matthew, and officials warned that life-threatening flooding from swollen rivers would continue for days.

Matthew, the most powerful Atlantic storm since 2007, was downgraded to a post-tropical cyclone on Sunday.

In the United States, the number of fatalities rose to at least 22, with nearly half in North Carolina.

After receiving as much as 18 inches of rain from Matthew over the weekend, North Carolina's skies were clear on Monday, but there were major problems from overwhelmed rivers and breached levees.

UN seeks $119M for Haiti storm victims

A girl walks in a beach next to the debris left by Hurricane Matthew, in Jeremie, Haiti. GETTY IMAGES

The money will go to provide food, clean drinking water and shelter to the most vulnerable among 1.4 million people in need, after large areas of crops were destroyed and infrastructure was damaged last week, the U.N. said in the three-month appeal to donors.

The United Nations appealed for $119 million on Monday to bring life-saving assistance to 750,000 people in southwestern Haiti, which is reeling from a direct hit by Hurricane Matthew.

"Hurricane Matthew has resulted in the largest humanitarian crisis in Haiti since the 2010 earthquake, at a time when the country is already facing an increase in the number of cholera cases and severe food insecurity and malnutrition," it said.

Haiti started burying some of its dead in mass graves after Hurricane Matthew, a government official said on Sunday, as cholera spread in the devastated southwest and the death toll from the storm rose to 1,000 people.

"This is not a population on its knees, but on the ground," Pierre-Andre Dunbar, Haiti's ambassador to the U.N. in Geneva, told a news briefing.

"Crops were also destroyed, which means the country will face a severe famine as the southwestern peninsula is considered the breadbasket of Haiti," he said.

In the Grande-Anse region on Haiti's western peninsula, some villages and towns suffered 90 percent destruction with low-income housing particularly affected, said Rudolph Muller of the U.N. Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs.

"Needs may grow in the days ahead as more areas are reached," he said. REUTERS

Colombia to announce peace talks with ELN rebels

Colombia's government and second-biggest rebel group will on Monday announce the start of peace talks, sources said, in what would be a boost for President Juan Manuel Santos after the rejection of his deal with the larger FARC guerrilla group.

The negotiations with the 2,000-strong National Liberation Army (ELN) will be confirmed by representatives of both sides at a news conference in Venezuela scheduled for this evening, two government sources told Reuters.

The talks are then expected to take place in Ecuador.

The Colombian government and the ELN will make an announcement at 2000 EST in Caracas, the governments of Venezuela and Colombia said in a statement on Monday.

Santos won the 2016 Nobel Peace Prize last week for his efforts to end a 52-year-old war with the leftist Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia: a surprising choice given voters narrowly rejected a deal he signed with them last month.

At war for five decades after being founded by radical Catholic priests and inspired by Cuba's revolution, the ELN has been in on-and-off closed-door talks with the government since January 2014 on how the two sides would conduct peace negotiations and what would be on the table.

It has remained active during that time, kidnapping and bombing oil installations, though in recent months it has released some captives. REUTERS

Russia and Turkey sign gas deal, seek common ground on Syria as ties warm

Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan hosted Russia's Vladimir Putin at an Ottoman-era villa in Istanbul for talks which touched on energy deals, trade and tourism ties, defense and the conflict in Syria, where the two leaders back opposing sides.

[Vladimir] Putin of discussing Russia-Turkish relations. ... I have full confidence that the normalization of Turkish-Russian ties will continue at a fast pace," Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan told a joint news conference.

The warming relations between the two NATO members comes as both countries are dealing with troubled economies and strained ties with the West.

Putin said Moscow had decided to lift a ban on some food products from Turkey, imposed after the Turks shot down a Russian fighter jet near the Syrian border in 2015, and that both leaders had agreed to work toward the full-scale normalization of bilateral ties.

They signed a deal on the TurkStream undersea gas pipeline, which will allow Moscow to strengthen its position in the European gas market and cut energy supplies via Ukraine, the main route for Russian energy into Europe.

The plan for TurkStream emerged after Russia dropped plans to build the South Stream pipeline to Bulgaria due to opposition from the European Union, which is trying to reduce its dependence on Russian gas.

Erdogan also said plans for a Russian-built nuclear power plant in Turkey would be accelerated. Time lost on the Akkuyu project because of strained relations would be made up, he said.

In 2013, Russia's state nuclear corporation Rosatom won a $20 billion contract to build four reactors in what was to become Turkey's first nuclear plant, but construction was halted after the downing of the Russian jet.

Putin received Erdogan in a Tsarist-era palace outside his home city of St. Petersburg in August, when the two leaders, both powerful figures ill-disposed to dissent, announced plans for an acceleration in trade and energy ties.

But progress on Syria, over which they remain deeply divided, has been more problematic. Erdogan described the topic as "very sensitive," but said he had discussed Turkey's military operations in Syria with Putin on Monday.

Islamic State confirms death of propaganda chief

Islamic State on Monday confirmed the death of its propaganda chief, whom the Pentagon said was killed in a U.S.-led airstrike in Syria's Raqqa province last month.

A statement posted online by the militant group paid tribute to Wa'il Adil Hasan Salman al-Fayad, also known as Abu Mohammed al-Furqan. The statement just referred to him by his alias.

It did not say when, where or how he had died.

The Pentagon said last month that a U.S.-led coalition airstrike on Sept. 7 had killed al-Fayad.

It said he was minister of information, overseeing Islamic State's propaganda, and a prominent member of its Senior Shura Council, or leadership group.

Islamic State's statement referred to al-Fayad as head of its media arm.

The airstrike took place near Raqqa, ISIS' de facto capital in northern Syria, and targeted al-Fayad while he was on a motorcycle outside his house, the Pentagon said.

Islamic State controls large parts of Iraq and Syria and has broadcast its beheadings of journalists and aid workers over the past few years. The group has sympathizers in several countries who have carried out bombings and shootings of civilians.

German spy chief says Syrian bomb suspect targeted Berlin airports

The head of Germany's intelligence agency (BfV) said a Syrian suspect arrested on Monday was building a bomb and probably planned to attack one of the airports in Berlin.

Hans-Georg Maassen told public broadcaster ARD that intelligence leads had suggested in early September that militant group Islamic State was planning an attack on Germany's transport infrastructure.

Spies managed to track down and identify the suspect in the eastern state of Saxony last Thursday and started a round-the-clock observation, Maassen said.

"We found out that he then bought hot glue in a discount shop on the following day. And then we immediately put all measures into place to start a raid because we assumed this can basically be the last missing chemical for him to build a bomb."

Shailene Woodley arrested for criminal trespassing at protest

Shailene Woodley, known for her role in the "Divergent" series and "The Fault in Our Stars," was arrested Monday during a peaceful protest against the Dakota Access Pipeline in Sioux County, North Dakota. The charge? Criminal trespassing.

The starlet live-broadcasted her time at the protest, which included a heavy police presence and ultimately Woodley's arrest, on Facebook. The entire video is over two hours long but the arrest takes place in the last 4 minutes. Ultimately, it was her star power that had her singled out for arrest. When she asked why she was the only person out of hundreds to be arrested, the officers responded that it was because she had been "identified."

This is a perfect example of when being woke goes wrong.

Ryan Lochte is engaged

Disgraced Team USA Olympic swimmer Ryan Lochte is clearly moving on from the mess he created this summer when he lied about being robbed during the Olympics in Rio de Janeiro. The six-time gold medalist lost several endorsements as a result of his ... mistake. But he was quickly on the rebound, snagging a spot as a contestant on "Dancing With the Stars."

And now the athlete is preparing to add marriage to his comeback saga. Lochte proposed to his girlfriend, former Playboy model Kayla Rae Reid, on Sunday night. He announced the news on his Instagram account shortly after. The couple, who met on Tinder, have been dating since March.

Turns out you can still have a happily ever after even after getting drunk, committing vandalism, making up a robbery story to try to cover it up and disgracing your country. He provides hope to us all.

Kim K amps up her security

We're still keeping an eye on things in the aftermath of Kim Kardashian West's robbery in Paris last week. We're getting morsels of intel as the investigation continues. Here's the newest round of updates.

A glimmer of hope is on the horizon for the 35-year-old. Kardashian West's diamond-cross necklace was found outside of the Hotel de Pourtalès where the robbery took place, say sources for TMZ. However, authorities hope to use DNA evidence from the found necklace to identify the assailants.

The star is also beefing up her security. On top of that, TMZ reports that the mother of two will be flanked by at least two armed guards who are former Secret Service agents and travel in an armored vehicle.

While some of Kim's sisters are also said to be tightening their security, her brother, Rob Kardashian, appears to only need protection from internet trolls and the fiery temper of his fiancée, Blac Chyna.

Ginger spice is pregnant

"Tonight is the night when two become..."

Well, five for Geri Halliwell Horner and hubby Christian Horner.

The redheaded singer, known as Ginger Spice to most of the world, took to Instagram to announce that she is pregnant with the couple's first child together. The baby-to-be will join Geri's 10-year-old daughter and Christian's 3-year old, both from previous relationships.

While we're extremely happy for Geri, we die hard Spice Girls fans wonder what this means for the 20th anniversary reunion she, Melanie B. (Scary Spice), and Emma C. (the original Baby Spice) announced only a few months ago. Babies are known to do a lot of things, but "Spice Up Your Life" isn't one of them.

Producer Jeremy Lloyd and vocalist
Samantha Gongol of Marian Hill.
TIMOTHY SACCENTI

Philly-bred Marian Hill want to get you onto the dance floor with "Act One"

RACHEL RACZKA
@rachelraczka
rachel.raczka@metro.us

Marian Hill know they bring "sax-ual" vibes; it's intentional. The Philadelphia-bred duo made up of producer Jeremy Lloyd and vocalist Samantha Gongol couldn't have more wholesome roots — their band name comes from "Music Man" characters Harold Hill and Marian Paroo, whom they portrayed in a production at Havertown Middle School. However their sensual, hip-swaying full-length debut "Act One," incorporates not-so-innocent themes.

"We like each song to be its own world," says Lloyd from a car en route to Colorado with Gongol. "On almost every song on [Act One], the sound came first — the instrumental won't be fleshed out, but I'll have an idea of the beat. Then we'll sit in that world we want to create with that beat, and figure out what the song's melody and lyrics are all about."

This time, it's the horn-heavy, come-hither track "I Want You" or the smoky beat-dropping "Down." With "Act One," the duo take a step away from the boudoir — a domain they owned with their 2013 EP "Play" — creating tunes that are more likely to get you on your feet than into bed. But still, getting in the groove is important for Gongol, whose sultry vocals define the act.

"For me, it's about feeling each song very specifically and getting comfortable with their maturity levels," she explains. "Each song [now] sounds a little bit different than when we first started out with the album. I try to make it a little bit sexier depending on the vibe of the show."

Marian Hill liken themselves to the modern day equivalent of a piano man and a jazz singer — but with a different set of keys. "Sam and I have that similar dynamic," explains Lloyd. "Except now I'm a computer making music happen."

Their live show also calls back to an earlier era, where the two can hold the stage with a minimalist set with the addition of bassist/sax player Steve Davit. Lloyd says the group designed the illuminated backdrops to create a "Marian Hill world," lighting the Deco-inspired panels to follow the beat of each tune.

Following the tour, Marian Hill — who admit they tend not to do much songwriting while on the road — will head back to New York to start on their next album.

"I'm pretty excited about putting out new stuff as early as next year," Lloyd says. "That's pure speculation — the timeline — but we don't want to stop for too long in terms of releasing new music."

A coloring book of your childhood

"That's So '90s Pop!" is an ode to the era that won't make you cringe.

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

You could make the case that the dream of the '90s is still alive for Patrick Sullivan, but not in a "Portlandia" way. It's more that he just likes '90s stuff. The 27-year-old Brooklyn-based graphic designer still bumps "C'est La Vie" by B*Witched and thinks Britney Spears is "carrying the torch" of the era (we agree).

While researching "That's So '90s Pop!" the adult "fill-in activity book" that he wrote and illustrated—essentially a coloring book, plus obscure facts, quizzes and wacky games, like a Kris Kross Kris crossword and Eminem fill-in-the-blank haiku—Sullivan took a deep dive into Reddit and online message boards, including one exclusively dedicated to Mandy Moore's early career as a national anthem singer in Orlando, Florida.

What results is a both tongue-in-cheek and sincere ode to the pop stars of the era, which the Long Island native refers to as "a kind of funhouse mirror of Seventeen magazine quizzes." It even comes with a Carson Daly cut-out mask, "so you can host your own is underrated and why one-hit wonder Irish girl group B*Witched is his cult favorite.

Adult coloring books are all the rage. Your book is a "fill-in activity book." How is it different?

countdown. (Nail polish not included.)"

While millennials may have reached peak '90s nostalgia, Sullivan's homage bypasses the kind of sentimentality we usually associate with BuzzFeed posts and events that just don't need to exist—lookin' at you, '90s Fest—and instead plays up what's fun or oddball from the time. On one page, you'll learn that Nelson Mandela once referred to the Spice Girls as his heroes; on the next, you'll look for the meaning of irony in an Alanis Morissette word search.

As a merchandising and apparel designer for the likes of Carly Rae Jepsen, Britney Spears and Queen Bey herself, the debut author is also firmly rooted in the pop culture of today.

That doesn't mean he didn't throw back with us over the phone when we discussed key '90s topics like how Brian from the Backstreet Boys

As an artist myself, I wanted to take the drawing really seriously, but also to have this funny information as well and a bit more to do. I wanted it to be, if you were going to get it as a gift for someone, it [would] be a big package that had a lot to offer. When I was a kid, we would go to the beach and bring magazines about these people and take the quizzes, and I would draw on the pictures. I wanted it to have that vibe.

Who's your favorite '90s pop star?

There are the ones that shine bright and sort of live and die in the moment, and some that carry on forever. Britney's still carrying the torch. I think B*Witched is my favorite group that's sort of forgettable but also completely memorable at the same time. They just have that one song "C'est La Vie"—it was on the Disney channel original film "Smart House." It still might be my No. 1 party song.

Favorite '90s boy band member?

Ooh, JC Chasez [from "NSYNC"], but that's currently, just because I feel like we'd get along. But when I was growing up, I remember feeling very alone in my love for Brian [Littrell] from the Backstreet Boys. No one cared [about him] and I thought he was way cuter than Justin Timberlake.

On acting: "The community is the part that means the most to me." DEBORAH LOPEZ

Brian Tyree Henry of 'Atlanta' talks working his way up

The versatile actor moves from Broadway to one of the hottest shows on television.

JENNIFER LOGUE
jennifer.logue@metro.us

If you're a fan of hip-hop and well-written television, you should be watching Donald Glover's "Atlanta." The series follows Earn (Glover), a broke Princeton University dropout who sees opportunity in his cousin Alfred Miles (aka "Paper Boi"), a local rapper on the rise to become the next hip-hop success story. On a similar ascent is the actor who portrays Paper Boi — Brian Tyree Henry. From his days at Yale School of Drama to his critically acclaimed performance as The General in "Book of Mormon," the 34-year-old has seamlessly transitioned to screen from stage. Henry chatted with us about his growing career and that time he folded jeans at American Eagle Outfitters.

What was your initial reaction to "Atlanta?"
I was like, "Ah, finally. This writing is just perfection. This is what I wanted. This is great." It spoke to me — Alfred spoke to me. And, I was just so excited to read something so fresh and so different, so new. It just reflected a life that I know wasn't really showcased.

Where did you draw inspiration from for Alfred's character?
I went to college in Atlanta, and have a lot of friends who have been to Atlanta, lived in Atlanta. I tried not to study any personas that people may know. I just wanted him to come across as a person someone could really relate to, so that people who watch it could be like, "That's my cousin!" or "That's my best friend!"

In the show, you have characters grappling with the dream of making it in the music business vs. settling. Was there ever a time when you contemplated doing something else?

This is something that really changed my life. I think it was a way for me to find a community that I belonged in. The community is the part that means the most to me — not so much booking the gigs, not so much getting the money or the fame — it was the community that really brought me to this place. And, you know I never really thought of being an actor. There were so many people who saw how much I liked doing plays, and saw how much I loved the art. They said, "You know what, you should really give yourself a shot and go as far as you can." Now, yes if I needed to go and get a side hustle, I would but this is my thing.

What were some of your side hustles?

I worked in retail all throughout college at American Eagle Outfitters, but I mean this was before American Eagle was big, you know. I think I was the only person of color on the floor, and I did all the windows and I know how to do a fashion fold to this day. It really makes me angry. [Laughs] When I moved to New York, I was very fortunate enough to work in the service industry but working in the service industry gave me such a drive because I was like, "I can't do this forever." So it made it easier to get up and go and really hit those auditions. I definitely have done my share of hustling.

It paid off with "Atlanta." What do you and the cast do in your downtime together?

Text each other [Laughs]. We are constantly staying in touch with each other and constantly sending each other crazy .gifs, constantly checking in on each other. They are the most supportive group of people ever in the world. We just try to stay connected as much as we can. You know, we really love each other.

I read that you grew up with all sisters. What was that like?

It was amazing and it was terrifying at the same time. But it was definitely the thing that defined me and made me who I am. I am grateful to be a black man raised by all black women because they have showed me so much strength. They are some of the toughest women I have ever met in my life, and the most loving. They did most of their living — including my mother — without a male figure in their life. And for them to have a little brother — you know, the first boy — they really molded me into the man I am today. I will spend the rest of my life repaying them.

A new episode of "Atlanta" airs on FX this Tuesday at 10 p.m.

Iliza Shlesinger talks female empowerment in 'Confirmed Kills'

The new Netflix comedy special is now streaming.

JENNIFER LOGUE
@jenniferlogue
jennifer.logue@metro.us

Uproariously funny comedian Iliza Shlesinger is back on Netflix with her latest comedy special, "Confirmed Kills," covering everything from the black hole of a woman's purse to finally putting an end to our obsession with mermaids. This time around, however, the 33-year-old star is more than funny voices and side-splitting humor. Shlesinger aims to use her platform to drive meaningful conversations with her audience, too. She chatted with us from her home in Los Angeles about her career beginnings and using comedy to help women.

When did you decide you wanted to do comedy professionally?

I always knew I was going to be funny for a living. Growing up in the suburbs of Dallas, I didn't have access to comedy clubs, but I think I just got it where I could. I'd take in a lot of TV, a lot of sitcoms, a lot of sketch shows and then you find other like-minded kids and you form an improv troupe. I knew I was going to be funny for a living, but I didn't know what that was going to look like.

You add a lot of physicality to your comedy. What inspires it?

It's sort of baked into our brains as Americans. We know bad guys flinch over, witches have creepy teeth and bony fingers. My body naturally forms to the idea of a cartoon I have in my mind and it comes out onstage and helps get the point across. You can use words, but the physicality of it really helps to illustrate what you're doing and it just comes out naturally.

What makes "Confirmed Kills" different from your last Netflix special, "Freezing Hot?"

When I finished "Freezing Hot," I remember feeling like I didn't get out everything I wanted to say and that I was moving toward saying something more uplifting versus just making fun of girls. There was this fire that got lit in me where I was like, 'If I keep just making fun of girls and we're all laughing at ourselves, eventually I might become part of the problem.' I found myself wanting to help women by defending them and say, 'Here's why we think the way we do and here's why the world is scary to us.' But do it in a way that girls had fun and men didn't feel alienated.

You dived deeper into issues facing women on this one.

Here's what's tough. I'm a white girl from an upper middle class family and I've never been

Iliza Shlesinger's newest Netflix comedy special, "Confirmed Kills," is now streaming on the network. NETFLIX overweight so I can't stand there like, 'Life is great. Love your body. F— the haters.' That's not the reality for most, but just because I seem one way to you doesn't mean I don't have my own things that I've battled. I've been put down for having opinions. I've been called names because I'm a girl or because I'm Jewish or for whatever reason. My whole life I've just had this thing in me where I've never had a reason to listen when somebody tells me to be quiet. So I can come from the perspective of a woman who has had to withstand the slings and arrows of society.

Interesting.

I can't tell you to love your body if you hate your body, but what I can tell you is that most people only care about themselves, so the amount of time we're going to waste stressing over everything most people don't even notice. And only an a—hole expects perfection.

"Confirmed Kills" is now available for streaming on Netflix. Shlesinger will be embarking on a national tour in promotion of it, swinging through Philadelphia at the Trocadero on Friday, Nov. 11.

Healthy cooking for kids, made easy

A new cookbook provides life hacks for busy parents

KATE MOONEY
@yatinbrooklyn
kate.mooney@metro.us

Stephanie Middleberg knows how hard it is to find time to cook healthy meals for both your kids and yourself, in addition to everything else you're trying to do. As the mother of a 14-month-old boy and founder of her own company, Middleberg Nutrition, she found herself in need of practical solutions as much as her clients.

With her first cookbook, "The Big Book of Organic Baby Food," out Oct. 18 on Sonoma Press, the NYC-based dietitian tackles the time crunch with 200 quick and healthful recipes for infants through the toddler years, as well as meals for the whole family. Over the phone, she shared her tips for how to best plan a week of meals, what to look for on labels when you're shopping and how to get kids to eat their veggies.

What are some tips for new parents getting started home cooking? It's stressful enough getting food on the table, even more stressful when you have to be a short-order chef. In the book, the recipes [should] appeal to both adults and kids. If you have them eating what you eat early on, you can take what you're making for yourself and then put them in a blender and feed [that] to your baby.

Much of it is based on cooking in bulk and freezing the purees, so you have it for the week and all you have to do is defrost it. It might take an hour longer on a Sunday, [but] once you get all your produce chopped and steamed or roasted and blended, it will end up making your weekday life so much easier.

When shopping, what should parents look out for on labels?

Anything that's longer than five ingredients, or has ingredients you can't pronounce, I say to limit that in your child's intake. USDA Organic is the best label to look for. Eggs, they should be pasture-raised vs. cage-free. For meats, ideally if we can do grass-fed, that's the gold standard there.

Each year the Environmental Working group releases the Dirty Dozen, the 12 fruits and vegetables that are going to have the most pesticides, so those are the ones you want to make sure to buy organic. Sugar is something to look out for on labels. A lot of baby foods, even if they say "kale and apple," a lot of times fruit juice is the first ingredient on the label, which means it has the most.

Moving ahead to older kids, what is the ideal school lunch to pack?

I love the PlanetBox lunch boxes. They have all these different compartments that make it fun to assemble lunches in. You want to have a protein, you want to get vegetables in. Usually kids love dip, so guacamole or yogurt is good. Then you can put in a complex carb, like whole-wheat bread for a sandwich or roasted squash. And add a treat, like fruit.

What about kids who are picky eaters?

Always have something they're going to like, but then adding something new to their lunch, even if they don't eat it, at least they'll start to see it. It can take up to 25 exposures for a kid to decide they want to try it and enjoy it. I would also make a picky eater part of the planning and the assembling. Get them involved, ask them what they want for lunch, have them help make cut-outs of the sandwich or pack the dip, bring them to the grocery store with you.

What about sweets?

Yes, kids should be kids! It's about the amounts and how often. Pick a few days that you're going to put a dessert in, but not every day, you don't want them to expect it. There's always birthday parties and vending machines — it's going to get in there.

and salt. In a separate bowl, whisk together the honey, butter, eggs and milk. Add the wet ingredients to the dry ingredients, using a spatula to gently fold the mixture in until just combined. Fold in the blueberries. Fill each muffin cup three-quarters full. Bake until the muffins are set, 13 to 15 minutes. Store the muffins in the refrigerator for up to three days or in the freezer for up to six months.

TIP: You can replace the blueberries in this recipe with ½ cup chopped dried fruits, such as cranberries, prunes or raisins.

I'm in love with the NFL Network's "Football Life" documentaries and one that premiered last Friday that was sneaky good concerned former San Francisco 49ers quarterback Steve Young.

The doc went into detail about Young's relationship with Joe Montana, and how late, great Niners head coach Bill Walsh would consistently put Young into games despite Montana being at the peak of his powers. Later, when Montana was coming off of injury and Young had an MVP-level season, Walsh would flip the script and insert Montana in place of Young. It wasn't anything Young or Montana did wrong, it's just that Walsh thought he could get the absolute best out of both quarterbacks by making each player fear for his job. The play certainly worked, as Montana and Young are today both regarded as top 10 quarterbacks of all time.

Now, Patriots head coach Bill Belichick is not above stealing ideas from brilliant football minds, so it got me to start wondering whether or not Belichick could be ready to pull some of this QB competition chicanery with Tom Brady and Jimmy Garoppolo in the next few years.

Brady was as good as ever on Sunday against the Browns, completing 28-of-40 passes for 406 yards and three touchdowns. He finished with a sparkling 127.7 passer rating.

Brady — of course — had every reason in the world to be pissed off in his return, given that he was dealt the most bogus suspension in the history of pro football. And he should continue to light the world on fire — in fact if he puts up numbers all years like the numbers he put up in Cleveland on Sunday, he will be a favorite for NFL MVP despite missing four games.

All that said, he's 39 years old and the Patriots need to have a backup plan if, 1) Brady gets hurt; or 2) Brady suddenly starts playing like he's 39. Garoppolo certainly showed great promise in his five-plus quarters as QB of the NEP, so we could see him get more cameos like he did late in Sunday's win over the Browns. Belichick could even opt to start Garoppolo late in the year just to keep everyone — other teams, Brady, even Garoppolo himself — on their toes.

You've gotta believe that Belichick expects 28-of-40 for 406 yards and three touchdowns out of Brady each and every week going forward. That's fair, when you employ a man who is considered by most to be the G.O.A.T.

Belichick demands perfection, and he will never stop applying pressure to his players — even the G.O.A.T. — to get that perfection.

Statistically sound

"Bend but don't break" is an annoying football term that ranks right up there with "prevent defense." As lame as the term is though, the Patriots trot out a classic, bend-but-don't-break defense each and every week. There's no way around it.

There were plenty of moans and groans in the first quarter of the Pats-Browns game on Sunday when Cody Kessler (yes, THE Cody Kessler) sliced through the Pats secondary — as if Ellis Hobbs and Kyle Arrington were the starting corners — and tied the game at 7. But the Pats' defense used this early ugliness as a feeling-out-process of sorts. Truth be told, it didn't hurt that Kessler got hurt and Charlie Whitehurst took the rest of the snaps — but you get the point. The Browns didn't score again until the fourth quarter.

While the Pats haven't reminded anyone of the '85 Bears this season in terms of defensive aesthetics, the stats back up that they are a top NFL unit. Through five games, the Pats have allowed the fourth-least amount of points per game in the league, giving up just 14.8 ppg. Only Minnesota, Philly and Seattle have performed better.

Aries You're in a better position career-wise than you might think. Though you might see only dark clouds ahead, don't retreat from doing what you should and can do.

Taurus Because all your focus is placed on lofty objectives, it might be difficult for you to see the multitudes of lesser but still profitable opportunities.

Gemini A joint venture in which you're involved should be uppermost in your mind. Diverting your attention elsewhere could dilute your efforts.

Cancer There is a hard way to do things and an easy way. Even though you might recognize the difference, for some reason you'll make things tougher than they need to be.

Leo If you find yourself in the position of being unable to finalize an important project, don't make things worse by stewing over it.

Virgo Don't turn your household into a military installation. Harsh rules and commands won't be nearly as effective as making polite pleas.

Libra Remember, the mind is a remarkable mechanism for performing wonders. All you have to do is marshal your thinking to conquer doubt.

Scorpio Because of an inability to capitalize on a good opportunity, the biggest problem you'll have to contend with is accepting your shortcomings.

Sagittarius It might be wise to analyze your desire for something material. There's a chance you may be seeking it for the wrong reasons.

Capricorn You might be truly grateful to someone who does a favor for you, but unable to express your gratitude in a way you feel is adequate. Nonetheless, do your best.

Aquarius Disappointment is likely if someone for whom you do a favor is unable to adequately express his or her thanks. You'll feel better if you don't expect anything.

Pisces You're not a kid anymore. Stop shunning a former collaborator just because he or she erred in the past. Be the bigger person and forgive and forget. EUGENIA LAST
